1 I. INTRODUCTION

2 Plaintiffs understand that they are swimming upstream with this motion. That their request
3 may be out of step with local practices. But local practices are no substitute for local rules and they 4 do not trump federal rules. This is a significant case against a confessed crooked corporate 5 defendant, and plaintiffs cannot risk compromising any of the evidence against defendants out of 6 fear of backlash from the assertion of their right to gather that evidence.

7 For years, defendant Scotts Miracle-Gro (“Scotts”) used a special ingredient to prolong the 8 shelf life of its wild bird food. There was only one drawback: it rendered the food toxic. The 9 pesticide that Scotts used clearly warned that “Exposed treated seeds are hazardous to birds and 10 other wildlife. Dispose of all excess treated seeds and seed packaging by burial away from bodies of 11 water.” Scotts took a different approach. It bagged up the seeds and sold them as “premium” wild
12 bird food. It took the government nearly four years to expose Scotts’s crime, and earlier this year
13 Scotts admitted that from late 2005 to early 2008, it had knowingly and illegally applied this poison
14 to over 70 million bags of bird food, which it sold through subsidiaries to an unsuspecting public.
15 Scotts further admitted that it did so, despite being explicitly warned by a pesticide chemist and an 16 ornithologist working for Scotts about the potential threat to birds from using this pesticide in the 17 bird food Scotts was selling nationwide. Plaintiffs were among, and represent, the victims of this 18 fraud.

19 Scotts concealed its criminal acts for years, and we all know that over time, memories fade
20 and documents are lost or destroyed. Plaintiffs have diligently pursued discovery by conferring with 21 defendants on every topic listed in Rule 26(f) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure. They have 22 proposed a reasonable discovery plan and have submitted that plan to the Court. Plaintiffs even 23 offered to limit their initial discovery to the following: (1) the documents that were already 24 produced in the criminal case against Scotts; and (2) depositions of five former employees, whom 25 Scotts has already admitted had direct knowledge of its criminal conduct. Defendants have 26 acknowledged plaintiffs’ efforts and proposals, but have refused to respond to them or to meet to 27 discuss them. Based on the express language of Federal Rules 26(f)(1) and 37(f), as well as Local 28 Civil Rule 83.4.a.1.f., plaintiffs respectfully request that the Court compel defendants to do so.

1 II. STATEMENT OF FACTS¹

2 On November 16, 2012, plaintiffs' counsel wrote a Rule 26(f) conferral letter to defense
 3 counsel. Among other things, the letter set forth plaintiffs' proposed discovery plan (including eight 4 discrete subjects of discovery), offered to meet anytime to discuss any of the Rule 26(f) topics, and 5 set November 30, 2012 as a target date for submitting a discovery plan to the Court. Several letters
 6 from both sides followed. Throughout this correspondence, defendants refused to confer in good 7 faith because they assert a unilateral right to stay discovery in this case. On December 10, 2012, in 8 an effort to avoid having to file this motion, and any real burden to defendants, plaintiffs offered to 9 limit their initial discovery as described above. Defendants refused to discuss this compromise.

10 III. ARGUMENT

11 A. There Is No Automatic Stay of Discovery in This Case

12 The premise of this case is about as simple and sound as it gets: people would not buy wild 13 bird food if they knew it was hazardous to birds and other wildlife. Scotts has already pled guilty to 14 a federal crime, in which it admitted to knowingly and illegally treating its bird feed with an 15 pesticide that rendered it hazardous to birds and other wildlife. In light of this exceptional backdrop, 16 there is no need to subject this case to the same procedural skepticism that others may face. Yet,
 17 defendants steadfastly insist that they have the right to assert unilaterally a PSLRA-style automatic 18 stay of discovery. No statute provides defendants with this power. Nor does any Federal Rule of 19 Civil Procedure. Nor does any Local Civil Rule.

20 Instead, the federal and local rules are meant to expedite litigation. "Had the Federal Rules
 21 contemplated that a motion to dismiss under Fed.R.Civ.P. 12(b)(6) would stay discovery, the Rules
 22 would contain a provision for that effect. In fact, such a notion is directly at odds with the need for 23 expeditious resolution of litigation." Skellercup Indus. Ltd. v. City of L.A., 163 F.R.D. 598, 600-01
 24 (C.D. Cal. 1995). See also CivLR 41.1(a) ("Actions or proceedings which have been pending in this 25 court for more than six months, without any proceeding or discovery having been taken therein 26 during such period, may, after notice, be dismissed by the court for want of prosecution . . .").

27 ¹ In light of the Court's 5-page limit for this brief, including declarations and exhibits, 28 plaintiffs will bring to the hearing on this motion all documents containing the quotes in this brief.

1 Contrary to defendants' perspective, "the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure does not provide 2 for automatic or blanket stays of discovery when a potentially dispositive motion is pending. Indeed, 3 district courts look unfavorably upon such blanket stays of discovery." Mlejneky v. Olympus
4 Imaging Am., Inc., 2:10-CV-02630 JAM KJN, 2011 WL 489743, at *6 (E.D. Cal. Feb. 7, 2011)
5 (citing Seven Springs Ltd. P'ship v. Fox Capital Mgmt. Corp., No. CIV S-07-0142 LKK GGH, 2007
6 WL 1146607, at *2 (E.D. Cal. Apr.18, 2007); In re Valence Tech. Sec. Litig., No. C 94-1542-SC,
7 1994 WL 758688, at *2 (N.D. Cal. Nov. 18, 1994); Skellercup, 163 F.R.D. at 600-01). Of course,
8 here, defendants' position is even more extreme in that they asserted an automatic discovery stay 9 with no potentially dispositive motion pending.

B. Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 26(f) and 37(f) Require Defendants to Confer With Plaintiffs

Far from an automatic discovery stay, the federal rules provide very simple steps for initiating the discovery process:

(d) Timing and Sequence of Discovery.

(1) Timing. A party may not seek discovery from any source before the parties have conferred as required by Rule 26(f) . . . ,

* * *

(f) Conference of the Parties; Planning for Discovery.

(1) Conference Timing. Except in a proceeding exempted from initial disclosure under Rule 26(a)(1)(B) or when the court orders otherwise, the parties must confer as soon as practicable---and in any event at least 21 days before a scheduling conference is to be held or a scheduling order is due under Rule 16(b).

Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1) and (f)(1). Also contrary to defendants' position, participation in a Rule 26(f) conference is not subject to the whim of either party:

(f) Failure to Participate in Framing a Discovery Plan. If a party or its attorney fails to participate in good faith in developing and submitting a proposed discovery plan as required by Rule 26(f), the court may, after giving an opportunity to be heard, require that party or attorney to pay to any other party the reasonable expenses, including attorney's fees, caused by the failure.

| Fed. R. Civ. P. 37(f).

The Local Civil Rules include “Civil Rule 26.1 Deposition and Discovery,” which does not alter or affect Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(d)(1) or 26(f)(1) in any manner. Regarding Federal Rule 26(f)’s

1 mandate that “the parties must confer as soon as practicable” “except . . . when the court orders
 2 otherwise,” the Court has not ordered otherwise in this case and nowhere in the Local Civil Rules is 3 there such an order. In fact, Local Civil Rule 83.4.a.1.f. (“Professionalism”) expressly directs that 4 “[a]n attorney in practice before this court will . . . Subject to the additional provisions of Fed. R.
 5 Civ. P. 26 and Civil Local Civil Rule 26.1, communicate with opposing counsel in an attempt to 6 establish a discovery plan and a voluntary exchange of non-privileged information.”

7 Defendants’ position appears to be based on a misreading of Federal Rule 26(f) and Local 8 Civil Rule 16.1.c.2.b. In their initial refusal to participate in the mandated Rule 26(f) conference,
 9 defendants’ counsel wrote, “As you know, the Rule 26(b) conference is triggered by the scheduling 10 of a Rule 16(b) scheduling conference. See Rule 26(f)(1).” This assertion is plainly wrong, as 11 demonstrated by the actual language of Rule 26(f)(1). After plaintiffs’ counsel pointed out this 12 misreading, defendants responded with another, “the Local Rules have the Rule 26(f) conference 13 occurring after the ENE. See Local Civil Rule 16.1.c.2.b.” Despite defendants’ citation, Local Civil 14 Rule 16.1.c.2.b. says nothing of the sort. In fact, the only reference to Rule 26(f) in the local rules is 15 within the Patent Local Rules, which require the parties to conduct their Rule 26(f) conference “No
 16 later than twenty-one (21) days before the ENE” See Patent L.R. 2.1(a) (emphasis added).

17 C. A Stay of Discovery Requires a Strong Showing

18 Defendants’ self-declared stay of discovery stands in marked contrast to the standards
 19 applied by every court to consider requests to stay discovery. As noted above, “district courts look 20 unfavorably upon such blanket stays of discovery.” Mlejnecky, 2011 WL 489743, at *6. Mlejnecky
 21 was an opinion from the Eastern District of California, which observed that “a motion for a 22 protective order seeking to preclude discovery must be supported by ‘good cause’ and a ‘strong 23 showing.’” Id. (citing Blankenship v. Hearst Corp., 519 F.2d 418, 429 (9th Cir. 1975)). Similarly, 24 in the Northern District of California, a “party seeking a stay of discovery faces a heavy burden of 25 making a ‘strong showing’ why discovery should be denied.” Valence, 1994 WL 758688, at *2 (also 26 citing Blankenship, 519 F.2d at 429); see also Gray v. First Winthrop Corp., 133 F.R.D. 39, 40 27 (N.D. Cal. 1990) (“The moving party must show a particular and specific need for the protective 28 order, as opposed to making stereotyped or conclusory statements.”). Likewise, in the Central

1 District of California, “[s]uch general arguments [that discovery should be stayed pending the 2 outcome of a dispositive motion] could be said to apply to any reasonably large civil litigation. If 3 this court were to adopt defendants’ reasoning, it would undercut the Federal Rules’ liberal
 4 discovery provisions.”” Skellerup, 163 F.R.D. at 600 (quoting Gray, 133 F.R.D. 39, 40).

5 District courts throughout the Ninth Circuit recognize that requests to stay discovery pending
 6 a dispositive motion require good cause and may not be effectively granted by one party to a case.
 7 See, e.g., Vivendi, S.A. v. T-Mobile USA, Inc., C06-1524JLR, 2007 WL 1168819, at *1 (W.D. Wash.
 8 Apr. 18, 2007) (party seeking stay carries a “heavy burden” of making a “strong showing” and 9 courts apply a “case-by-case analysis”); Gleason v. Chesky, CV94-66-S-EJL, 1995 WL 560139, at 10 *7 (D. Idaho June 22, 1995) (“Court may [stay discovery pending determination of motion to 11 dismiss] only for ‘good cause’ shown and ‘when it is convinced that the plaintiff will be unable to 12 state claim for relief.’” (quoting Wood v. McEwen, 644 F.2d 797, 801 (9th Cir. 1981)); Norm
 13 Thompson Outfitters, Inc. v. Starcrest Prod. of California, Inc., CIV. 03-1149-H, 2004 WL 957774, 14 at *3 (D. Or. May 4, 2004) (by “refus[ing] to participate in the discovery process, arguing that 15 discovery should be stayed pending resolution of the Motion to Dismiss. Essentially, defendant has 16 granted itself a stay of discovery without plaintiff’s consent or the court’s approval . . .”).

17 Defendants’ self-declared stay of discovery prior to even filing a motion to dismiss makes a
 18 mockery of the careful analysis a request to stay discovery demands. See Skellerup, 163 F.R.D. 598
 19 at 601 (setting forth several factors court should consider for the “required” case-by-case analysis).
 20 The most appropriate response to this sense of entitlement is an order compelling defendants simply 21 to act in good faith by conferring as required. See, e.g., ING Bank, fsb v. Fazah, CIV S-09-1174-
 22 WBS-EFB-PS, 2009 WL 3824751, at *3 (E.D. Cal. Nov. 16, 2009); Shock v. CDI Affiliated Servs.,
 23 Inc., CV-09-635-S-BLW, 2010 WL 672148, at *6 (D. Idaho Feb. 20, 2010); see also OMG Fid., Inc.
 24 v. Sirius Technologies, Inc., 239 F.R.D. 300, 306 (N.D.N.Y. 2006) (“interjection of delay into 25 litigation for the mere sake of delay serves no useful purpose”).
